Summer's Last Fling— The Onset of Autumn

by Charley D

More than any other month, September seems to embody the very changeability of life itself. It includes summer's last fling on Labor Day weekend (a time to have fun), vacations' end and schools' starting again (a time to get serious), and the onset of autumn (a time to reflect). With this issue we bring you a similar panoply of sobriety's challenges, triumphs, and pitfalls.

Claire A takes up our 12th Step Challenge and answers, in her own way, the question: can we accept and adjust to the successes and failures life deals us without despair or pride? Tradition Nine's directive that AA ought never be organized inspires Jamie M to reflect on how our disorganization, paradoxically, makes the whole thing work. In explaining Tradition IX, Teddy W takes the paradox a step further and explains the role of leadership in our disorganized fellowship. Turning from leaders to members, our Dear

Alky column tackles the question whether and under what circumstances an addict can become an AA "member."

Have you ever looked closely at the title page of the Big Book? Bob S does and what he finds may surprise you and even give you a new appreciation for what our fundamental text really means. How did it all begin? Our AA History feature looks at Bill W's formative years and the occasion of his first drink.

Anonymous writes on our Sin of the Month – gluttony – and explains how it became for her a "sin of sobriety." On the other hand, in our Longtime Interview, Ray M speaks of his journey to sobriety – a journey that includes making food deliveries to the needy as part of his amends.

Step 11's direction to meditation led MEM to explore Buddhism's take on the 12 Steps. Don't miss his fascinating description of what he found at the San Francisco Zen Center.

Longtimer Interview: Ray M.

Service as a Living Amends

by the Drunk Whisperer

Ray M. was interviewed in March; he is a regular presence at Intergroup events and meetings, and his A.A. service, as well as his bread delivery to the larger community, are his living amends to those in his life harmed by his alcoholism. Today, Ray has to carry around a canister of oxygen at all times, but it barely slows him down.

DW: Tell me about getting sober.

RM: I'm an émigré [from Malta]. I went to grammar school right here in the Tenderloin at St. Boniface. And I still go to church there. By the age of 15, I was a full-blown alcoholic. I knew that for a fact, I just didn't know what it was called. I got sober on May 12, 1991, Mothers' Day that year and this, and also, the 56th anniversary of when Bill and Bob met. Thirty days later, on June 10, 1991, A.A.'s anniversary, I landed in St. Luke's Hospital, having suffered heart attack #1. I remained there for 23 days. Having lost the place where I was living, I made arrangements to move in with Mom to "help her out," though really, I needed a place to continue my recovery from alcohol and that heart attack.

DW: How old were you?

RM: I was 44. I ended up in the hospital and I woke up days later out of an induced coma with my hand shackled to the bed; I was re-arrested by the police because I hadn't shown up for the sheriff's work program for my last DUI. Did they really think they had to handcuff me in a coma? [laughter]

My service commitments started six weeks later, secretarying a meeting in Novato. I was seduced into General Service when I was six months sober in November 1991. It first started in San Francisco where I was a GSR [General Service Rep] for two meetings, but there was so much in-fighting at the district level, nobody doing anything, no one committing themselves. This was around 1992. By 1994, I headed south to San Mateo where I literally did everything except treasurer. My General Service commitment came to an abrupt end when oxygen became necessary 24/7 as a resource to exist. If I had to do it over again, though no regrets, I would have burnt the Lucky Strike factory many, many years ago.

One thing I carried until I came into the rooms was neglect of others. A relationship can never be any weaker than when you say to someone, "I'm going to be there," and you don't show up. So today that is really important to me, I do what I say I'm going to do, or I show up where I say I'm going to be. That keeps my life solid today. There are people who think I'm nuts, and that's good because I know I'm nuts. Like this bread thing that I do: 21 years this last December. And it all started from a living amends. My first sponsor said about living amends, "You need to do something for someone who is incapable of doing that thing for themselves or others, but above all, be creative." You know, I hurt a lot of people who aren't here today. I think of my dear mom who was a very unselfish woman, I learned so much from her. And my dad. And other women in my life.

DW: Explain what the bread thing is.

RM: I pick up bread, a minimum of five days a week. Initially, my attempt was to see what kind of foodstuffs I could garner for an upcoming alcothon at 1010 Valencia and West Bay Alano Club in August 1991. I had gotten sober because of an alcothon. In those days, every holiday was an alcothon; we drank every holiday, so why not? You could go to 8 or 9 meetings in a day. People saw me with the paper [to verify meeting attendance] and said, oh, you want signatures, go down to 1010 Valencia, and it worked. I was cleaning the bathroom, looking at myself in the mirror and saying "Wow, they like me," while I'm wiping the stupid toilet. [laughter] So I wrote letters to get food; I got Bakers of Paris and a bunch of Safeways, and I started out delivering to senior citizen organizations. I had about 15 places from San Mateo to the City where seniors would convene, it got crazy.

DW: What was the peak of the bread runner activity that you did?

RM: I'd say it was around 1998. It had gotten very difficult; I spent my whole days, some of these places were very difficult to get to. Even now—like this morning, I got bread twice; tomorrow, I'm hoping to get bread once. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, I've got a roster of about 250 families that live in Bayview or Excelsior District who have gotten ahold of me somehow, someway who have said, we could use some bread.

DW: You also bring a meeting to the VA, on Friday, don't you?

RM: I do. First, third, and fifth Monday, and Friday night. I do thirteen H&I commitments.

DW: I know you have a long commitment to Archives.

RM: I've been a long-standing member of the Intergroup Archives Committee since 2000. So I'm in my 13th year there. It's a slow process. I've served at area level archives, too. An example of an archives project I got really interested in was finding out about Al Steckman who wrote this book, "Bertram D., Hardhat, Inebriate, Scholar." I have a copy and it is very difficult to get. Not on Amazon or other booksellers. I want to know more about Al Steckman, his mother worked for Emmet Fox, someone Bill W. and Dr. Bob "borrowed" from. All those sayings that we have, you know, "Think, Think, Think," "One Day at a Time," those all come from Emmett Fox.

DW: So your service commitment to the bread project that you started within months of getting sober, it was something that came to you and you developed and created and implemented, on top of your A.A. service. Service keeps you sober.

RM: No question. If it weren't for this [oxygen], I'd be in General Service again. I just can't travel any great distance. And heat and elevation and those sorts of things, deplete my resource. Those twelve area meetings and four conferences, I could never do it now. But I show up where I say I will and I pick up the telephone every time it rings. You never know when you're going to help another alcoholic; you can save somebody's life by just answering the phone!

To hear more from Ray, contact Central Office to read a transcript of the entire interview, or to listen to it.

A man goes into a bar and says, "Give me a drink before the trouble starts." And the bartender gives him a drink.

He drinks it and says, "Give me another drink before the trouble starts."

He downs that one and says, "Give me another drink before the trouble starts." And the bartender says, "When's this trouble going to start?"

The man says, "The trouble starts as soon as you realize that I don't have any money."

[Bada-bing, bada-boom.]

Can we now accept and adjust to either [failure or success] without despair or pride?

by Claire A.

This question gets at the heart of my program these days and asks me whether I am staying in the middle of the boat, as the saying goes. Now that I am sober 2 years, can I take the next right steps, even when life hands me something I don't really think I want, i.e., failure or success? The quick answer is "sometimes."

I am defining failure or success to include things like, "Did I stop beating myself up?" "Did I treat my kids fairly?" "Did I get that contract I wanted and needed?" "Did I do my program?" "Was I kind and loving toward all?" These are questions that are on my mind daily, and I tend toward the self-critical end of the spectrum, where pride and despair seem to cohabit. I am proud enough to think I can do things perfectly, and when things don't turn out perfectly, I despair. I'm also pretty fearful: anxiety is always waiting for an opening. I tend to fear failure, even in doing things that are fairly routine. Even when I encounter success, I look for the moth-eaten lining.

Luckily, I have tools to help with this, and one of them is trying to help others. When I am self-centered, self-pitying, and self-loathing, what helps is to turn toward someone else. Thus, I find relief. No matter what is going on for the other person, my attention is on their needs. Putting the attention on someone else stops the racket in my head, as if all the characters in there suddenly stop in mid-sentence and look over at that other person. I can take a deep breath, and maybe help that person at the very least by listening to them.

As an aside, I know that listening is an incredibly powerful tool, both for the listener and the speaker. When someone is truly listening to me, I find that it makes me honest. I stop messing around and get to what is really going on for me. Often, I have the answers to my own problems, but they don't become clear (or I don't want to or can't face them) until someone listens to me. Other people say this to me, too - that talking out their problems to someone who is really listening helps them to find the truth and see the next right step.

So, listening to another suffering person is a huge help to me. I can easily find other strugglers by calling someone from a meeting. I can go and sit in a meeting and listen to people's stories. I can listen to a newcomer during the fellowship time at the end of the meeting. Listening to sponsees is of course another avenue.

One thing that has helped me a lot lately is to think of the fearful part of me as an actual character, a child. I also have a character I call the critic, and it really helps me to think of these characters when I am fearful or self-critical. If I can be compassionate and accepting to the child, for example, I find the fear dwindles guite a bit. When the critic is haranguing on about how I didn't do this or that thing perfectly, I want to say, "Oh, brother, here you go again!" That takes some of the sting out of the critic's voice. So listening and responding to the struggling voices inside me, and not becoming controlled by those voices, is also part of my recovery.

The long answer to the question is "Yes, I can adjust to and accept failure and success without despair or pride, if I practice my program!"

Dear Alky:

We have had an influx of people who want to identify as "addicts" at our morning meeting, without adding the word alcoholic. When asked, one such addict replied, "I never really drank. I used drugs and smoked pot." After my questioning, she continued to attend our meetings and identify as an "addict." This just doesn't feel right and now one of our addicts has been elected to a service position. This feels even worse.

I know that something needs to be done, but I'm not sure what to do. I don't want to banish them from 12 Step recovery, yet our meeting is slowly becoming infused with non-alcohol related talk.

Appreciate any suggestions. Thanks,

A Grateful Alcoholic

Dear Grateful:

A.A.'s sole focus is and always has been alcoholism. Twelve-step approaches to dealing with other afflictions have proliferated – drug addiction, sex addiction, eating and gambling disorders, to name a few. A.A. takes no position on those programs because they don't deal with drinking. A.A. World Services has published an excellent pamphlet on this issue entitled, "Problems Other Than Alcohol," available online at www.A.A.org.

So what to do with the drug addict who shows up at an A.A. meeting? If that person has a desire to stop drinking, that qualifies him for membership. Remember, an early edition of the Big Book required an "honest" desire to stop drinking for A.A. membership but subsequently dropped that modifier. Thus, any desire - feigned, half-hearted, lukewarm or cooler – will suffice. This issue exists mainly in the minority of meetings that identify themselves as closed, although even "open" meetings should deal only with alcoholism. If the secretary announces it's a closed meeting only for those with a desire to stop drinking, someone who stays after hearing that indicates she has that desire. If she also finds A.A. helpful in overcoming drug addiction or anything else, who would, on that basis, exclude her? Isn't she just following Step 12's injunction to practice these principles in all our affairs?

That your meeting is "slowly becoming infused with non-alcohol related talk" can really prove problematic. A.A. meetings frequently end up discussing topics that range far afield from benders, barrooms and blackouts. So long as we seek to find a spiritual way of living to keep us sober, that really doesn't constitute a diversion. By finding that spiritual way of living, by helping each other to address life's joys and sorrows in a spiritual and sober way, we're sticking to A.A.'s narrow path, even if we don't mention alcohol in what we say. If you think your meeting has strayed from A.A.'s single focus, we encourage you to bring it up at a business meeting, perhaps bringing with you a copy of "Problems Other Than Alcohol." Thanks very much for raising this question, which, we can assure you, is not unique to your meeting.

-- Alky

[Following is the text of the "blue cards" available at Central Office which give GS Conference approved introductions for open and closed A.A. meetings.]

Open Meetings: "This is an open meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous. We are glad you are all here – especially newcomers. In keeping with our singleness of purpose and our Third Tradition which states that "The only requirement for A.A. membership is a desire to stop drinking," we ask that all who participate confine their discussion to their problems with alcohol."

Closed Meetings: "This is a closed meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous. In support of A.A.'s singleness of purpose, attendance at closed meetings is limited to persons who have a desire to stop drinking. If you think you have a problem with alcohol, you are welcome to attend this meeting. We ask that when discussing our problems, we confine ourselves to those problems as they relate to alcoholism."

Tradition Nine

by Jamie M.

I love Tradition Nine! "A.A. as such ought never be organized" We've had problems over the years with anonymity breaks, self-support, arguing about Higher Powers, selfsupport and almost all the other issues in the Traditions. But I've never been at a business meeting of a group, or a General Service district or area meeting where someone got up and complained about A.A. being too organized! People seem to muddle through somehow. As a group of misfits who all are ready to resent authority at the drop of a hat, we can really get behind this one. So that's a good thing.

But seriously folks, what's the real up side to being semi-disorganized all the time? Well, the absence of too much structure makes it pretty clear to the average member that we're really operating on the principal of "If not me, who? If not now, when?" People generally get it that there's no outside force that's going to come along and save the day. It's a tool for helping us to grow up, learn to work together and make sure that the essential things get done. If the coffee maker doesn't show up, someone volunteers-- or the meeting deals with having no coffee and refreshments that night. If the speaker doesn't show up, the secretary volunteers someone. If no one shows up to open the meeting place, the two or three who are at the door go have a mini-meeting in the park across the street (true story from my A.A. life). The show goes on. The lack of structure also minimizes chances to blame others, which also helps.

It's true that "we may create service boards or committees directly responsible to those they serve." My experience is that even something as simple as that can lead to headaches. Boards and committees have a chair, a mission, issues with who is a member, how people get on the board, etc. For me the key word is may because there are many times when some ad hoc grouping of people can take up a specific task and then re-group or go out of existence as soon as the task is done. Often the "leader" is simply the one who knows the most about what's going on. Interestingly enough, there have been studies of leadership that show this is exactly what works best. How nice to know that we've stumbled onto something that works.

Long may we be (somewhat) disorganized!

Big Book Title Page

by Bob S.

The Story of How Many Thousands of Men and Women Have Recovered from Alcoholism.

For years I had not noticed that the first three words were italicized. This realization has altered my concept concerning the very nature of this book. For previously, I took the Big Book as clear-cut directions to follow if I wanted to stay sober, or if not, get drunk. Someone counted 72 "musts" in the first 164 pages. However, I no longer consider the BB a prescription; rather, it is a description of how others found and maintained sobriety.

Yet, it is still our basic text! That is to say, it is a description of the path others took. I am being offered an opportunity to do as they did. The "musts" simply mean this is what I must do if I decide to follow the A.A.

path to sobriety. This is not to say that I cannot just make up my own program and stay sober. But it would be very dishonest to label my personal program as the Alcoholics Anonymous program, as I notice so many do around A.A. tables.

Thank God I decided to follow the A.A. Big Book path and have not had a drink since my very first A.A. meeting in 1975.

A.A. History: The Three Legacies

Part Three

This series of installments contains information from the presentation, "A Timeline History of Alcoholics Anonymous," written by Arthur S. and edited by Gilbert G. In the second installment of this series, we'll cover some brief biographical information on Bill Wilson and Lois Burnham.

Bill's Wartime Years

On April 6, 1917 the US declared war on Germany and entered WW I. In May 1917, Bill W, who was attending Norwich University Military Academy, left for officer's training at Plattsburg, NY. After eight weeks of artillery training at Ft Monroe, VA, he was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in the 66th Artillery Corps and sent to Ft Rodman outside of New Bedford, MA.

That summer, Bill (at age 22) had his first drink of liquor at Emmy and Catherine Grinnell's house in New Bedford. It was a Bronx Cocktail made up of gin, dry and sweet vermouth and orange juice. He got thoroughly drunk, passed out, threw up and was miserably sick the next day. Bill wrote to Lois that he loved the experience with alcohol.

Lois and Bill were married January 24, 1918 at the Swedenborgian Church of the New Jerusalem in Brooklyn, NY. Her grandfather performed the ceremony and her brother Rogers served as best man. Unable to have children, Lois and Bill were prevented from adopting. They found out later that it was due to Bill's drinking reputation.

Diary of Two Motorcycle Hobos - 1925 to 1926

When Bill returned from overseas after WW I in 1919, his alcoholism progressed rapidly. Lois often arranged month-long or more walking trips thru ME, NH and VT partly to give them time to think and partly to get Bill away from drinking.

In April 1925, Bill and Lois began a 1year motorcycle camping trip on a 3wheeler Harley-Davidson with sidecar to evaluate businesses.

Bill W. as Market Analyst - 1925 to 1926

Among the places Bill and Lois visited were GE in Schenectady, NY and Portland Cement in Egypt, Pennsylvania. By winter, they were in Florida and then headed north into Canada. Bill was one of the first "market analysts." His alcoholism progressed further downward.

In the spring of 1926, Bill and Lois returned to Brooklyn for the marriage of Lois' sister, Kitty. Bill's drinking problem was openly discussed with his benefactor, Frank Shaw, at business conferences between him and Shaw. For the next few years fortune threw money and applause Bill's way.

In the summer of 1926, Bill and Lois departed for another six months of investigating businesses. Lois later chronicled their travels in a book titled "Diary of Two Motorcycle Hobos."

They could have traveled first class on Bill's expense account and $20,000 line of credit ($241,000 today). Instead, they drove a second-hand Desoto Lois outfitted with curtains so that they could sleep along side of the road.

For the next few years Bill was quite successful financially. However, his successes would later be ended by a worsening drinking problem. Over time, Bill sank into a form of drunken hostility that poisoned his relationships.

Sin of the Month: Gluttony

Loaded Again

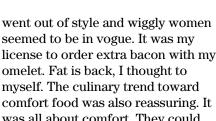

by Anonymous

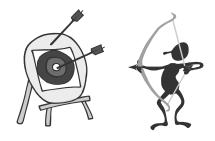

When I first saw gluttony as one of the seven deadly sins, I thought it did not fit with the others. Why would God care that I ate a super burrito two nights in a row? Wasn't I only hurting myself? And even if I was sinning against my own flesh or trashing the temple of my body, wasn't it okay so long as I went back to my diet on Monday? Since I am not officially fat on any medical charts (granted, I'm close to the outside limit of "normal"), why shouldn't I be able to eat an entire bucket of popcorn at the movies?

How did gluttony get to be a bad guy? Was there not enough food for the other villagers, so the one who was pigging out denied others their fair share? Or was it an aesthetic thing, the unsightly bulging and blubbering of an overfed stomach. I was glad when the emaciated look seemed to be in vogue. It was my license to order extra bacon with my omelet. Fat is back, I thought to myself. The culinary trend toward comfort food was also reassuring. It was all about comfort. They could count me in.

Although I never drank or used drugs after my first A.A. meeting, I feel like I have gone through early sobriety many times. The "second" time is when I quit smoking, two years after getting sober. When I stubbed out the last cigarette, my whole struggle with my feelings started all over again. The pain of not having the escape, even if it was just a cigarette on the back porch after dinner, made life feel not worth living. As overly dramatic as it sounds today, that is truly how it felt. The emotional escape that cigarettes provided was one aspect of their allure. Another major appeal of that habit was its handy quelling of my appetite. When I put out the last cigarette, I took on five pounds that never left.

Even though I am sober, and don't smoke, and don't suffer from untreated mental illness, I still get that jumping out of my skin feeling. It's the same feeling I've had since about age 9. It gives me a sense that I want "something," need "something." I am restless and discontent; I need something out there to make it stop. If nothing arrives, the irritability sets in. Soon I feel the cool waves of air flowing against my body as I stand in front of the open refrigerator. Later I drift to the cupboards, shaking boxes and listening to the whispers of their crispy contents.

Being on the uppermost edge of "normal" body weight, I have not availed myself of food-related Twelve Step programs. But I can see how the Twelve Steps of Alcoholics Anonymous contain everything I need to address my gluttony. Turning away from my boredom, doubt, fear, agitation, aggravation and sadness and reaching for salt, sugar, fat, crunching, chewing, gulping and swallowing is another unhealthy way of trying to change how I feel. Gluttony is a sin of sobriety, because it takes me away from the real solution. To call someone, to read and write, to be of service, to pray, to take a walk, to sit quietly – these are the antidotes to the drink, the drug, the smoke, the snack. It is not the scale, the body fat calculator, the tape measure or the mirror that determines how "normal" I am. Only my higher power knows if I have properly nourished my heart. tP

Concept IX: Leadership in A.A.

by Teddy W.

Whoever heard of such a thing! The idea that anyone could lead a rebellious clan of children of chaos, to us seems almost laughable and so it should be. We don't need bosses in A.A. and we have our ultimate authority – the group conscience. What we do have in A.A. are trusted servants and while they do not drive by any mandate as such, they should lead by example.

So, we do have leaders in A.A., just not the kind of leaders based on the traditional concept of leadership that seems to operate in the world at large. To be a service leader in A.A. requires, in addition to our 12-step program of recovery, some sound spiritual principles.

Our co-founder Bill W realized that, like no others, we are prone to the human urge for power and prestige and that is why we have a structure of General Service, providing those services to the fellowship that it is not possible for the groups or Intergroups to provide, within which is enshrined the principle of humility. The servants entrusted with its administration, be they GSRs, Delegates, Trustees, whoever, are guided by a set of spiritual principles contained in the Twelve Concepts for World Service. Concept IX addresses the need for us to choose our trusted servants carefully. Appended to the Concept is an essay that Bill W. wrote in 1959 - Leadership in A.A.: Ever a Vital Need, which is a road map for a very different kind of leader - the ones who act for us rather than boss us.

According to Bill, good leadership:

 Originates plans and ideas, but in important matters, consults widely before making decisions.

- Recognizes that good ideas can come from anywhere and gives credit to the source.
- Doesn't pass the buck, nor does it always give the people what they want. A good leader knows when (and when not) to do this – especially when the majority can be badly disturbed or misinformed – and has the ability to endure sustained criticism.
- Must take responsibility and when called upon give its reasons, and good ones.
- Must be capable of give and take the ability to compromise cheerfully is essential.

- Listens, very carefully, even to very angry people, because they can sometimes be dead right, even when the more calm and humble are mistaken.

Leaders must also have vision: the ability to make good estimates rather than indulge a wishful fantasy about tomorrow. This ability is the very essence of prudence, looking beyond the apparent short-term advantages and looking at long-term safety. It is precisely this process that resulted in our Twelve Traditions.

We shall be in continual need of these attributes of tolerance, responsibility, flexibility and vision in our trusted servants. Indeed, these are valuable assets to carry into many areas of our lives where we are entrusted with responsibilities.

If you think that none of this affects you, then think again. Anyone who is a sponsor is a leader in A.A. and these qualities of leadership can make all the difference, often the difference between happiness and misery, life and death.

It is also my responsibility when electing trusted servants, whether at the group level or elsewhere, to avoid hit and miss methods, to put the group first and play my part in ensuring that our leaders in A.A. are not some special class of A.A., but like the conductor of a beautiful orchestra they can move in time with the heartbeat of A.A. and bring out the best in everyone.

This is an unofficial summary of the August 2013 Intergroup meeting provided for convenience; it is not intended to be the completed approved minutes. For a complete copy of the minutes and full committee reports see "Intergroup" on our website www.aasf.org.

Our intergroup exists to support the groups in their common purpose of carrying the A.A. message to the still suffering alcoholic by providing and coordinating services that are difficult for the individual groups to execute.

The Intercounty Fellowship has been organized by, and is responsible to, the member groups in San Francisco and Marin for the purpose of coordinating the services that individual groups cannot provide.

The meeting was held on Wed., August 7th, 2013 at 1187 Franklin St, SF CA.

The meeting was started with a call to order and the Serenity Prayer. Baskets for rent and dinner were passed. The July minutes and the August agenda were approved.

New Business

Carolyn R. San Francisco and Marin Teleservice are backing each other up when necessary. Holding a fellowship event (perhaps annual), starting with a pie and ice cream social. with meeting to share experience with Teleservice before and after getting sober.

Round Table: Michael P. leading discussion around Trusted Servant committee Talk about how the Traditions keep A.A. alive and how can we foster that even more, helping meetings understand how important the traditions are. Feedback from the tables: It would be good to have meetings that are focused on the traditions and have tradition sponsors to help guide meeting secretaries; incorporate traditions into step study meeting;; recite the responsibility statement; simplify, use the primary purpose statement, and trusted servants could set the example by bringing up the traditions as the topic of the meeting (or for a portion); newer people in AA are attending clubs and rehab centers; trusted servants could visit those meetings and discuss; work the traditions with your sponsor; as a GSR, each month we talk of the Concepts; we could do the same with the Traditions; it's up to each meeting to handle traditions in the way they want. Others thought its OK to educate meetings about the traditions.; traditions don't come up until there is a problem. It's up to individual groups and clubhouses; There are lots of meetings in clubhouses and many don't have commitments because the clubhouse does the work; we could bring workshops in and discuss opportunities for service; have a group inventory about the traditions. provide examples of modern and relevant ways in which the traditions come up now; give examples of how traditions are misunderstood; have a central office organized workshop (training session).

Next Intergroup Meeting: Wed. Sept. 4, 2013, 7pm, 101 Donohue St. Marin City CA. Orientation is at 6pm, dinner is served at 7pm.

Buddhism & The 12 Step Model of Recovery

by MEM

My curiosity was aroused when I read CLB's 12th Step Challenge article which appeared in The Point's July 2013 issue. The reference to the pamphlet 9 Essays published by the San Francisco Zen Center in particular caught my eye. My sponsor and I attended a meditation meeting there as part of our project to visit various venues, within and outside of A.A., in furtherance of our understanding and practice of Step Eleven.

9 Essays can be downloaded from the Zen Center's site at www.sfzc.org. The preface notes that the 43-page pamphlet is freely available and may be distributed in its entirely – provided the Introduction is always included. For this limited review I'll only say that the essays are authored anonymously and represent the wisdom accumulated by the Meditation and Recovery group which has been meeting weekly at the Zen Center since 2000. The group is open to members of all 12 Step programs, but the focus of 9 Essays is strictly from the alcoholic's point of view.

"Being Zen" has always appealed to me as a roadmap to a calm and spiritual way of life, even though I confess to not knowing exactly what the phrase means. My admittedly brief attempts to familiarize myself with Buddhist practice over the years have correspondingly yielded only brief understanding. I find that my lazy mind does not easily embrace terms in Sanskrit. While I can hold some of the basic concepts of Buddhism in my mind during a teaching and meditation session, by the time I hit the street, I'm generally back to a state of relative ignorance.

The format of each of the nine essays begins with the text of the Step (Steps Six and Seven are discussed in a single essay, as are Eight, Nine and Ten in another, thus resulting in nine essays rather than twelve). There are often other quotations from A.A. literature in the discussion of what the Step means. This is then expanded by looking at corresponding Buddhist principles, offering ways to see the language of our program in a new light and make spiritual connections which are often quite delightful.

To illustrate with some phrases from the essay on Step One: "The fact of suffering is the central teaching of Buddhism.... The initial teaching of both Buddhism and the Steps is recognition of the reality of suffering in our lives.... In AA this admission is generally called hitting bottom. This phrase is evocative in that it describes coming to a dead halt.... This moment of stopping is akin to the moment of awakening - in Zen parlance, going beyond delusion and enlightenment - the moment when we face reality unclouded by our conceptions."

The essay on Step Two discusses the concepts of belief systems and the notion of a higher power. As throughout the 9 Essays, the focus is often on language and what words mean. It is suggested that, "Perhaps rather than speak of a 'higher' power, we might do better to think in terms of a deeper or broader power...." For the new A.A. struggling with his or her "God baggage," such a simple suggestion may lead to a major shift in attitude and open a doorway leading out of the war against the "old fashioned" language of Bill W.

This pamphlet was a wonderful resource for me. It is replete with tried-and-true A.A. wisdom, infused with a gentle offering of basic Buddhist spiritual principles (whose names I have trouble remembering, despite the clarity with which The Buddha, The Dharma and The Sangha are identified). Transcendence, karma, cause and effect, the awakening mind - all happily resound with the spirit and intention of A.A.'s Twelve Steps. The 9 Essays is inspired writing and worthy of our attention, in furthering our own recovery or discussing with a sponsee, and I shall revisit its food for thought again and again in the future on my path to enlightenment and happy destiny. Think Bodhisattva. tP
